This is a work which should also appeal to the Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West, who are so proud of the early history of the state.

San Francisco Chronicle Gets the Wrong "Dope"

The game of basket ball played in Union Hall Friday evening of last week between the San Francisco Polytechnic school team and the Sonoma Independents was an evenly matched and well played one, instead of the ragged, easy victory for the Polytechnics of 45 to 13 reported in the San Francisco Chronicle. The Polytechnic team, aided by a few rank decisions of the referee, won, however, by a score of 25 to 18.

Sebastopol Times Incorporates

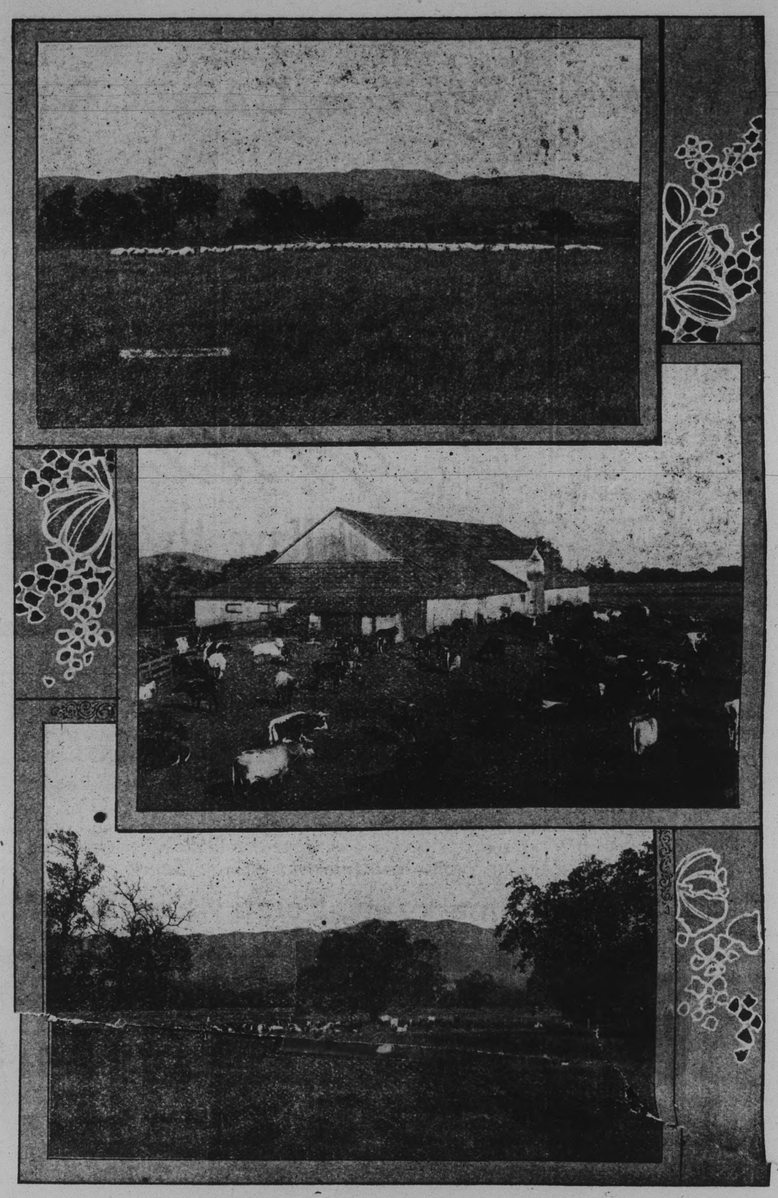
Articles of incorporation of the Times Publishing Co., which recently took over the plant and business of the Sebastopol Times, mention of which was made in these columns last week, were filed with County Clerk Billy Felt last Monday.

The incorporation is for a term of fifty years and the capital stock $10,000 at $100 per share. The directors are J. P. McDonell, 49 shares, F. X. McNutt, A. H. La- C. Chase, W. R. Layne, O'Leary, H. Layton trustee.

THE DAIRY FARM ONE OF THE VALLEY'S GROWING SOURCES OF DAILY REVENUE



"Bossy" Is Contesting "Biddy's" Right to the Title, "Queen of the Ranch." The Succulent Clover Fields of the Valley Are Aiding in Her Contention.

As a producer of blooded live stock Sonoma leads all other counties in the state. Year after year her horses, cattle, hogs and sheep have carried off first prizes at the State Fair at Sacramento, and the exhibits in this line made at local fairs have surprised visitors from abroad. If all the blue ribbons won by Sonoma county live stock d ring the past twenty-five years were united the coil would reach around the county.

The dairy herds of the Sonoma Valley are among the finest of the fine live stock raised in the county. All over the valley, where once the vaquero, scarcely less wild than the herds he watched, herded the wild cattle of the early settlers, are to be found the blooded dairy stock and the modern equipped dairy farm. The comely milk maid, or rather the homely milk man, has taken the place of the vaquero in guarding the herded wealth of the valley, and a most beneficial change it is proving.

The farms, stocked with the best strains of butter fat producing cows, find a ready market for their product in San Francisco and other nearby cities, which are easy of access by rail.

A recent estimate places the amount of butter fat produced daily in the valley at from 1,000 1,200 pounds. As before stated, this finds a ready market and is no inconsiderable source of revenue to the valley.

So important has the dairy interests in the valley become that ere another summer has rolled around a creamery to handle the product will be installed by the Sonoma Brewing Co.. and so confident are the proprietors of this concern of the future of the dairy industry of the valley that the creamery will be installed with an increasing business in view.

The dairy business, like the poultry business, is a "ready money" business, the farmer being paid for his product daily or weekly, and has done much toward putting the community on a cash basis. For this reason it is encouraged in all progressive agricultural sections.

Glen Ellen Grange Has Installation of Officers

Installation of officers and a discussion on woman's suffrage made the meeting of Glen Ellen Grange last Saturday a most interesting one. The affirmative in the debate on woman's suffrage was supported by Theodore Wagner, Mrs. Kate D. Hill and Mrs. J. H. Cobb and Thomas Johnson and Andrew Erickson took the negative side of the question.

Andrew Ericksen, master; Edward B. Payne, overseer; Mrs. Kate Hill, lecturer; R. P. Hill, steward; Edward Steiger, assistant steward; Mrs. A. O. Gaige, chaplain; Charles J. Poppe, treasurer; Thomas Johnson, secretary; Henry C. Lafferty, gatekeeper; Mrs. Anna Erickson, Flora; Mrs. Ida Steiger, Pomona; Mrs. Lottie Payne, Ceres; Mrs. Jessie H. Cobb, lady assistant steward; Geo. Cobb, trustee.

Appropriation Bill for Sonoma State Home

Assemblyman Herbert Slater of this district has introduced a bill in the assembly appropriating $201,000 for the Sonoma State Home at Eldredge.

BANKS SUE ON PROMISSORY NOTES

Which Are Secured by White Sulphur Springs Property Near Santa Rosa.

The Sonoma Valley Bank and the Santa Rosa Bank instituted proceedings in the superior court of this county Tuesday against John S. Taylor, former president of the Santa Rosa Bank, to recover the sum of $23,000 and interest on three promissory notes, secured by a mortgage on the White Sulphur Springs property of 1,400 acres near Santa Rosa.

One of these notes for $10,000 is held by the Sonoma Valley Bank and the other two—one for $11,000 and the other for $2,000—by the Santa Rosa Bank. The notes were to run for six months and a year respectively.

Attorney J. W. Oates, who represents the banks in the proceedings, asks the court to order a sale of the property at the hands of a commissioner.

The residents of Sebastopol are practically a unit in their opposition to the supervisors granting permits for saloons on the borders of the city after they have reduced the number of saloons within the municipality greatly by an increase in the liquor license.

PROGRAMMERS ELECT WORKS UNITED STATES SENATOR

Democrats in Order to Secure Patronage Take Insurgent Reformers' Slate---Legislators Ignore Instructions of Voters in Primary.

The much discussed legislative vote for a United States Senator to succeed Frank P. Flint took place at the state capital Tuesday afternoon, and, as predicted by the programmers, Judge John D. Works of Los Angeles was elected on the first ballot.

Works had the push behind him from the very start and at no time since the election has Spaulding had a look in, though the Call and other anti-Works insurgent newspapers have done a lot of hollering, which no doubt was indulged in to keep their courage up.

To the surprise of those not on the inside of legislative political deals the democratic members of both branches of the legislature took the program and voted for Works almost to a man.

Even our good democratic assemblyman, Herbert Slater, and Senator Juilliard, that bourbon of bourbons, joined forces with that erstwhile much despised Republican push and cast their ballots for Judge Works—for they have to eat, don't they?

The vote in the senate was as follows:

|---|---|
| Works | 30 |
| Spalding | 5 |
| Raker. | 3 |
| Kent. | 1 |

The vote in the assembly was as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Works | 62 |
| Spalding | 16 |
| Meserve. | 1 |

TOTALS.

| | |
|---|---|
| Works | 92 |
| Spalding | 21 |
| Raker. | 3 |
| Meserve. | 1 |
| Kent. | 1 |

In speaking of his election Judge Works made the following authorized statement to the reporters, which may make some of those on the inside smile:

"I am not taking this victory as one personal to myself. It is a triumph of right principles in politics over boss rule, an elimination of the interests.

"It is only one more step toward the freedom and independence of the individual voter that is destined to establish good government in the state and throughout the nation.

"My political convicitons have been declared without reserve and should be known to the people of California. They were known to the members of the legislature and resulted in my election.

"It will be my endeavor to maintain those principles in the United States Senate, as I have in the past as a private citizen. I hope that before another senator is to be elected in this state the power of election will be placed in the hands of the people themselves."

At a bond election held recently the citizens of Petaluma decided to purchase Kenilworth park for a public playground from the estate of Harry Stover, the racing king. The tract contains 70 acres, part of which is outside the city limits and can be purchased for $20,000.

Census returns issued at Washington on January 4 give Petaluma a population of 5,880, Napa 5,791, Santa Rosa 7,817.

OLIVES THRIVE IN SONOMA SOIL.

With the possibilities in Sonoma Valley for olive culture it seems as though our growers should devote some of their energies along this line of production. The fact that the late Colonel Geo. F. Hooper long since demonstrated that Sonoma soil could produce good olives should encourage the planting of new stock and the outside world should know where excellent oil may be produced in all its native purty. The olive crop is short this year and California will reap a rich harvest from this industry as will be seen by the following San Francisco review of the situation :

"With the olive crop in Europe practically nil, and with a very large shortage in this State, high prices to growers are being paid, though the crop is almost cleaned up from first hands, and record prices are expected for pickled olives and olive oil this season. Growers are being paid $40 per ton for oil olives, and $80 per ton for pickle goods. This is an average of $5 and $10 per ton more than is paid in the average good year. In fact, with better figures paid for certain desirable blocks of goods, this makes something like a high record for olive prices to growers in this State."

"The olive crop in this State has been light this year, ranging from one-third to one-half a normal crop. The fruit, however, runs to larger sizes and this will somewhat compensate for the shortage. Authoritative advices from Spain state that the crop there is 97 per cent short, which means there is practically no crop.

"There has been much buying in San Francisco by olive product manufacturers, and it is stated there is very little goods left to be bought up. The price of case goods has advanced from $2.25 to $2.50, but this is believed to be only the beginning of a very sharp and extensive advance in values. In fact, with spot stocks very light in San Francisco and Los Angeles it is believed the pinch of the shortage will be felt in about two months, and things are then expected to take an upward swoop."

WOMENS' PROGRESS.

A jury composed of women is sitting in judgment on a woman offender in the State of Washington and speculation is rife as to whether or not the fair jurors will convict or acquit. It is safe to predict that the jury will be as impartial and just in its findings as any jury of men, but whatever the verdict it will be civilized because it will be the verdict of women sitting in judgment on their own sex. If they convict, the old cry of woman's inhumanity to woman will go up, and if they acqit, cynics will call them chicken-hearted, sympathetic creatures whose hearts and not heads rule.

In all cases it might not be advisable to summon a venire of women, but in many cases there are questions which might be adjusted by women to the highest good of the community. There are enough phases of life in the workings of municipalities to elicit the interest of every thoughtful woman and it is as much her duty to interest herself as it is our male citizen.

If the Senate bill introduced in the first week's session of our Legislature providing for women to express their will on suffrage in this State becomes a law we will probably have the interesting spectacle of husbands seeking to restrain their wives from rolling up a majority vote in favor of the measure. Unless a decisive expression in favor of the ballot is secured the suffrage leaders plea will be ignored.

Husbands better start in to promise new hobble gowns to all wives inclined to vote in order to impede their progress on the day set for them to go to the polls and signify their will in this most important matter.

It pays to be stung. At least that is the deduction after reading of the odd hero of our Cuban campaign, who received a U. S. pension for having allowed yellow fever mosquitoes to bite him in the interest of scientific investigation.

Jack London says he is tired of the writing game and is going to be a backwoodsman. Buy gum! in other words, going into the eucalyptus business.

The meeting adjourned until Wednesday evening, Janurry 25, when the fire hydrant bids will be opened.

A Most Welcome Rain—Farmers and Dairymen Jubilent.

The storm of the past few days has given the soil a most thorough soaking and will insure a bountiful harvest in the Sonoma Valley. Pasture lands have also been greatly benefitted, and in consequence both farmers and dairymen are jubilant over the precipitation, which came none too soon to save the reputation of a valley which has never yet suffered seriously from drouth. The precipitation for the storm, as recorded by local U. S. Observer Hall, was 2.10 inches.

The "Kid" Has No Business Interests Here

"Kid" Sullivan, the San Francisco crook and pickpocket, who was released from custody on probation about a year ago and admonished to leave that city never to return on penalty of arrest, is again in the clutches of Chief of Police Seymour.

The offender, after being banished from the metropolis, took up his abode in the wilds of Lake county. The other day, however, tiring of his enforced absence from the tenderloin of San Francisco, he returned to that city and was recognized and pounced upon by two minions of the law and placed under arrest. The cops took the "Kid" before the chief of police, who ordered him locked up on a charge of vagrancy.

Sullivan pretended to be highly indignant when confronted by the chief. He claimed to be in business in this valley, and to back up his statement declared he had an interest in Morris Levy's hot springs resort. This is indignantly denied by Mr. Levy, who states that the man has never even been a guest at his hotel, let alone being associated with him in business.

The crook's story was widely circulated in the city press, but for all that he is a perfect stranger in these parts.

Game Preserve Law to Be Tested

Harvey Perkins of this city was arrested last Monday on a warrant issued from Judge Atchinson's court. Santa Rosa, on a charge of trespassing on the game preserves of the Santa Rosa Gun Club. The club's game preserves are located in the marsh lands at Merazzo, about eight miles south of this city. For a number of years there has been a clash between the club members and local hunters, who have invaded the preserves from time to time during the duck season. Up to the time of the arrest of Perkins the club has contented itself with warning intruders off its shooting grounds. The invaders claim they have a right to shoot on the preserves, citing the tide water privileges. The club members say no, that the preserves are under private ownership and that they have a right to drive off all trespassers.

It is to test this point of law that caused Perkins' arrest.

On Tuesday Perkins appeared before Justice Atchinson and deposited a cash bond of $50 to appear and answer to the charge.

New Market

J. Greenfeld has opened up a new fruit, fish, poultry and vegetable market on the east side of the plaza in the Lorenzi building, which has been fitted up especially for this business. Mr. Greenfeld will make a specialty of fruit and vegetables in season, dressed poultry and fresh fish on Fridays. Read his ad elsewhere in these columns.

D. Volquardsen, after an absence of several months, has returned to Sonoma with his well-boring outfit. During his stay in Sebastopol Mr. Volquardsen has been boring for municipal water in that city and succeeded in sinking a number of fine artesian wells. He is now sinking a well on the W. C. Miller place on Napa street, in the eastern suburbs of town.

The storm of the past week has driven the birds into the sheltered sloughs of the marshes by the thousands.

William Church Buys Relic of a Once Large Estate

Florence S. Shirley has disposed of the old Ohm's property at Embarcadero to William Church. Mrs. Shirley, who is a relative of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Ohm, inherited the property from their estate, which at one time was worth at least $200,000 in cash, houses and lands, but which through dissipation had dwindled down to less than $5,000 when the Ohms passed away several years ago.

Oldest Protestant Denomination in the State Issues Pamphlet.

A publication is just off the press which bears an interest to a large number of the people of the State. The little volume carries the rather dry title of "Minutes of the Northern California Congregational Conference," but hid away in the statistical tables and reports we find that this is the oldest Protestant denomination in the State, the Rev. T. Dwight Hunt having come here from Hawaii in 1849. The First Congregational Church, of which the late Dr. Adams was pastor, was founded by Dr. Hunt. Other churches sprang up through the years until at the annual meeting of that portion of the Congregational Church which lies north of Tehachapi there were reported about 140 congregations, while Southern California has an even hundred.

These churches are scattered all the way from Little Shasta, near the Oregon line, to Porterville, down Tehachapi way. There have been meetings held of the organized denomination for 54 years with no interruption, the meeting in October of this year having convened at Porterville.

The Congregationalists maintain denominational headquarters in the Mechanics' building, San Francisco, of which Rev. Charles C. Champlin, a graduate of our high school and the State University, is Registrar, where the Home and Foreign missionary work, the Church Building Society, Sunday School secretaries, etc., have their offices for the promotion of all branches of the Church activities.

The "Minutes" were compiled by Mr. Champlin, who is also pastor of Park Congregational church, and the following are a few facts culled from the report: Six new churches were formed during the year, four home missionary churches have come to self-support, the denomination finds itself equally at home in the mountains and lumber camps as in the crowded cities or the great agricultural valleys of our State. The California Home Missionary Society (Congregational) has aided 51 churches in 1910.

The oldest Congregational minister in the State, in point of service, is Dr. Willey of Berkeley, founder of the University of California, and Dr. Kellogg, a former President of that institution, was a Congregational Home Missionary.

SONOMA COUNTY NEWS EPITOMIZED

A marriage license was issued by County Clerk Felt Saturday to Henry Hansen, aged 50, and Bertha Malchow, aged 49, both of Vineburg.

A great many arrests have been made in the county during the past several weeks for selling liquor to Indians, and in all convictions the fine has been $50 and costs.

A total of 568 actions were instituted in the courts of Sonoma county during the year that has just closed. Of these 300 were civil suits, 506 probate actions and 62 criminal cases.

Acting on information furnished by Sheriff Burns of Mendocino county Deputy Sheriff Don McIntosh and Jailor Charles Meyers intercepted a large seven-passenger touring car at Windsor shortly before noon Friday and took into custody three Swedes who were hurrying to San Francisco with $5,994.15, the balance left of $6,850 stolen from the home of aged Mr. and Mrs. Mat Sassale of Navarro, near Albion, Mendocino county, on December 17. The men were returned to Ukiah Saturday to await trial.

Two children, Margaret Black, aged ten years, and Manuel DeSilva, aged six years, were playing together at the home of the lad's parents two miles west of Sebastopol Saturday. A 22-calibre rifle was hanging on the wall of the DeSilva home and the boy got hold of the weapon. Taking it down he playfully pointed the gun at little Margaret and pulled the trigger. A cartridge was in the magazine and the bullet passed through the girl's neck, severing the cartoid artery, causing death almost instantly.

FAMILY SACRIFICES

They Serve to Make a Merry Christmas

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

"I don't see how we can afford to observe Christmas this year, Henry," remarked Mrs. Tiddleberry two weeks before that anniversary. "We've had so much sickness and bad luck during the past twelve months that to make any gifts will mean getting in debt for living expenses, and I am unwilling to do that."

Mr. Tiddleberry looked up from his paper with a relieved expression on his tired face. "I've been pondering that matter for several days, my dear."

Suddenly the wife looked up and saw her husband take a cigar from his pocket, regard it speculatively and then, sighing, return it to the case.

"Henry," she said, "smoke your cigar! You needn't think you're going to save on your only consolation just to buy some foolish nonsense for the children. How much of your month's salary will there be after you've laid aside the amount of the interest due the first of the year?"

"None," confessed her husband candidly.

"Then why should we try to observe Christmas just as if this year had been a prosperous one?"

"You have stumped me, Anne. I hate to give up Christmas, but I guess we'll have to."

"I'll do the best I can," promised Mrs. Tiddleberry as she folded up the stockings. "There will be enough to eat, but it will be plain. I laid a little money away for Bob's suit and for Linnie's new coat, and that will be all the Christmas they can have this year. I can make some black walnut candy for them and some popcorn."

When she broke the news to Linnie and Bob the next day their young faces grew quite round and solemn, and she felt a little lump in her throat as they trudged off to school with a cheerful "All right, mother, dear."

"They're disappointed enough," she murmured, "but they won't say anything. I'm proud of their pluck."

Mr. Tiddleberry developed a habit of working late in the city, and each night found him taking a later train to his suburban home until finally he stamped into the house on Christmas eve just as the clocks were striking 11.

"Henry Tiddleberry," said his wife severely. "It seems to me the importing business is picking up or you're getting behind with your books. There must be some reason for your working late at the office. You never did it before."

"There is an excellent reason, my dear," said Mr. Tiddleberry amiably as he hung his overcoat before the kitchen stove to dry, "which I will explain to you in due time. It certainly is a wild night, Anne—a typical Christmas eve. Where are the youngsters?"

"Gone to bed like lambs," said their mother in a burst of admiration. "I haven't told them just what their Christmas presents were to be, but they are clever enough to guess, I suppose. I told them it was something to wear."

"How about dinner tomorrow? Got everything in that you need?"

"Everything," said Mrs. Tiddleberry, bending a flushed face over the evening newspaper she had just opened. "I told you this morning it would be the first Christmas eve you didn't have to do any shopping. Did you miss it, Henry?"

"Did I?" exclaimed Mr. Tiddleberry emphatically.

"So did I," admitted Anne soberly. "Doesn't seem like Christmas at all. I told the children to hang up their stockings."

"They might as well, I suppose," said Mr. Tiddleberry, rather gloomily. "If you hadn't forbidden me, Anne, I might have managed a few oranges or something. I believe I'll go out and get some now." He reached into the kitchen for his overcoat, but Anne slipped to the china closet and threw open the door.

"Wait, Henry! Look there!"

"Great smoke!" whistled Mr. Tiddleberry, and then he chuckled softly to himself. "Oh, Anne, Anne, how could you, when you forbade me to buy a thing?"

"I baked a half dozen Christmas plum puddings and sold them and made enough to get some oranges and nuts," blushed Mrs. Tiddleberry under his tender scrutiny. "I couldn't bear to have them find empty stockings."

"Is that all?" demanded her husband.

"Isn't it enough?" she evaded. "Come in the parlor and look at the coat and suit. I made a larger fire in the furnace and turned the heat in here so it would be warm when they got up in the morning."

"What else have you done, Anne?" persisted Mr. Tiddleberry. "Confess! I'll give you"—looking at his watch—"just three minutes. Fire ahead!"

Anne sank back in a big rocking chair and closed her eyes wearily. "Well, I found one of Linnie's old dolls and made new clothes for it from head to foot. It looks like new. Then I made her three dainty handkerchiefs. I had the material in the house, and I fitted a little workbasket for her That's all for Linnie. I made Bob a bath robe."

"A bath robe! Out of what—paper?"

"I had an extra blanket, a small one, so I dyed it red and made a robe for him, using a curtain cord and tassels dyed the same color. That's all except the popcorn and candy. I never spent a penny for anything except nuts and oranges."

"It's enough, Anne Tiddleberry, and you were the exponent of the giftless Christmas! Good night, my dear. Go to bed. I shall sit up awhile."

"I'm afraid I've spoiled your Christmas by objecting to the presents," she said, with compunction in her tone, as she lingered by his side.

"Not at all, my dear. I wouldn't be surprised if this turned out to be the happiest Christmas we ever had."

For a long while after his wife had departed Mr. Tiddleberry waited in silence, and when he had quite determined she must have retired he tiptoed softly to and fro between the parlor and the hall closet under the stairs, his stockinged feet making no sound on the carpeted floor.

First he untied a package and looked with unstinted admiration upon a cotton crape kimono in gay tints of red and yellow, a pair of brown kid gloves and a book that his wife had longed for. He found a pair of stockings in her darning basket and hung one beside Linnie's, putting nuts and candy and a big orange in first. Then he stuffed in the kimono and the gloves and laid the book on the shelf above it.

Into Linnie's well filled stocking he dropped a tissue paper package containing a silver bracelet, and into Bob's there went a pair of skates. After he had solemnly executed a highland fling on the hearth rug Mr. Tiddleberry extinguished the lights and went to bed much pleased with his own shrewdness.

Later Mrs. Tiddleberry arose from beside her sleeping husband and crept down in the darkness to hang one of his socks beside Bob's. She heard him stirring and flitted back again without noticing any additions to the row of stockings on the shelf.

Just before daybreak Bob's door opened softly, and a ghostly figure made a journey down to the parlor and returned. It was not until the cold Christmas sun was peeping over the rim of the world and gilding Linnie Tiddleberry's bedroom window that the little girl stirred from her warm nest and timidly slipped down the stairs over the pricking carpet.

Just as she reached her bedroom door her father's voice roared in mock ferocity: "Merry Christmas! Who goes there?"

"Me," cried Linnie. "Merry Christmas, everybody."

That was the signal for all the Tiddleberrys to arise, for it was a Christmas custom with them that they should all go downstairs together on Christmas morning. Mr. Tiddleberry looked very complacent and self satisfied as he hurried into his clothes. His wife was beaming with some hidden happiness, while Linnie and Bob sat on the top stair fully dressed and giggling joyfully.

It was a solemnly happy procession that wended its way down the stairs that morning. "Remember, children," said Mrs. Tiddleberry, "I told you not to feel disappointed if Santa Claus did not remember you very bountifully this year. Perhaps he has forgotten you entirely. We are all so happy," she looked around at the little group, "that it seems as though we had every gift that Christmas can bring, health and one another and peace and good will."

"And lots of love," burst out Linnie.

"And the pleasure of working for each other," added Mr. Tiddleberry emphatically as he opened the parlor door.

"Oh!" cried Linnie delightedly.

"Great smoke!" ejaculated Mr. Tiddleberry, feeling of his own dependent sock. "What's here, Anne? Wearing out your pretty eyes over a knitted scarf for me? And what is this and this?" He held two objects to view.

"I gave you the knife, and I want a penny so as not to cut friendship," shouted Bob from the folds of his bath robe as he strapped on his skates, "and I gave mother the hairbrush, and I made Linnie the doll house out of a soap box and some wall paper."

"And I gave you the pipe, father, and the perfume is for mother, and I knitted the toboggan cap for Bob out of my old sweater—I unraveled it," cried Linnie breathlessly.

Mrs. Tiddleberry was crying softly over the contents of her stocking. "I thought I was the only one who could sacrifice for the others," she said shamefacedly, but they all fell upon her with caresses.

"Bob," said his father, "how did you do it?"

"Sold my rabbits—didn't want 'em anyway," said Bob defiantly.

"I ran errands for Mrs. Mosher, and altogether I earned 45 cents," declared Linnie proudly.

"Anne, you made plum puddings," accused her husband.

"Yes, and there's one for dinner, with other good things," she said happily. "How about your, Henry? How could you afford it? Does your delay in getting home nights account for it?"

Mr. Tiddleberry nodded. "Been clerking in a bookstore nights to earn those things. Bully plan too. Guess I'll do it every year."

"This is the best Christmas we ever had," declared Bob enthusiastically as he flung his arms about his mother's neck.

"I guess it must be because we all love each other so much," said Linnie sagely. And that was really the secret of the whole affair.

More Rain and Farmers Are Crying Enough

"It never rains but it pours" is a trite old saying which is exemplified by the storm which set in last week and the rainfall of the past few days. Evidently Jupiter Pluvius, after holding back the floodgates of heaven until after the new year, is endeavoring to make up the lack of rainfall in November and December by turning the floodgates loose the present month. At the present time the soil is thoroughly saturated and with the usual light spring rains a bountiful harvest is assured the Sonoma Valley farmer.

MORE SENSATIONS IN BURKE TRIAL

District Attorney Lee Springs Them and Puts Cloud on Doctor's Reputation.

The trial of Dr. W. P. Burke is ftill progressing before Judge Seawell and a jury in the superior court of this county in Santa Rosa. The case will probably not go to the jury until the fore part of next week.

Tuesday and Wednesday's session were devoted to character witnesses for the defense, and those examined stated that Burke's reputation for peace and chastity was good, but each witness admitted that no attempt had been made to look up the doctor's reputation.

All went well so long as the defense adhered to its attempts to prove the reputation for peace and quiet of the defendant. But when Attorney Leppo asked former Superior Judge R. F. Crawford of Santa Rosa what the reputation of the defendant was for chastity District Attorney Lea had the opening for which he had been waiting.

Crawford testified that Burke's reputation in this regard was good. District Attorney Lea asked the witness if he had ever heard of Dr. Burke performing criminal operations at the sanitarium; if he had ever known that Dr Burke was indicted for forgery in Lake county, and if had ever heard that on February 5, 1910, Dr. Burke performed a criminal operation and ordered the nurse to cremate a six months old child in the sanitarium furnace; if he had ever heard further that in 1906 Dr. Burke was found in a compromising position in the room of a woman patient at the sanitarium, and if he had ever heard that in 1909 Dr. Burke was found in a similar position with another woman at the sanitarium.

It was evident from District Attorney Lea's line of questions that the prosecution will combat vigorously the attempt of the defense to prove Burke a moral man.

Rain Has Little Appreciable Effect on Hay Market.

The rainfall of last week, although a veritable soaker and general throughout the State, has had no appreciable effect on the hay market and prices remain about the same as before the storm.

Somers & Co., in their report on the condition of the market for the week ending 17th inst., say: "The past week has been very quiet on the hay market, mainly on account of the inclement weather which always causes a lull in the hay trade, as it is impracticable to move hay in the rain. Receipts were lighter than usual, a total of 2065 tons arriving in comparison with 2698 the week previous.

"The generous downpour which lasted a week and which covered practically the entire State was of immeasurable benefit to the hay and grain farmers. In districts where it was impossible to plow on account of the lack of moisture farmers will now be able to work without difficulty and there is every assurance that a large acreage will be sown. Land which had already been seeded will be equally well benefited for in many places the grain had started and was greatly in need of moisture.

"Prices of hay today are very much disturbed. Sufficient time has not elapsed since the rain to permit a definite range of prices to be established. Quite naturally hay is weak and already many holders are seeking a market. The situation locally is very quiet and there is nothing at present to indicate any improvement in the demand. In the interior cities and towns which buy hay the situation is much more active than in the San Francisco bay section.

"The very fancy grades of wheat and tame oat hay we believe will be sold quite readily throughout the season for there does not seem to be plentiful supplies in the State of these particular kinds of hay."

Eph Weiss, the expert refracting optician of San Francisco, will be in Sonoma at the Union Hotel February 2, 1911.

IMPORTANT GAME LAW DECISION.

Land Owner Holds the Game and No Hunter Has a Right to Invade His Premises.

Apropos to the arrest of Harvey Perkins last week on a charge of trespassing on the game preserves of the Santa Rosa gun club on the marsh lands south of this place it may prove interesting to know that the Third District Court of Appeals has recently handed down a decision in a similar case appealed from the Superior Court of Napa county. In effect the court says you cannot hunt wild game on other people's property if you are denied the privilege by the owner or lessee. The decision will prove of interest to sportsmen all over the State, as it involves the right of hunters to pursue game on lands leased to gun clubs in particular and private owners in general. It reverses the decision of Judge Gesford of Napa county in the case of Edward H. Foreister against Frank Johnson et al. The lower court found in favor of Johnson. The original case involved the alleged trespassing of Johnson and other Napa sportsmen for the purpose of hunting on certain premises owned by Foreister, who had purchased the land from the State and had adequate title. The contention was that he had no right to keep hunters from going on "Fly Bay," a tide-water body of water, which was classified as navagable.

Judges Hart and Chipman concurred with Judge Burnett, who wrote the decision for the Appellate Court, in holding that the issue involved was similar to the former case of Kellogg vs. King, wherein it was held that "the wild game of the State belongs to the people in their sovereign capacity and is not subject to private dominion to any greater extent than the people through the legislature may see fit to make."

"Yes," said Judge Burnett, "under section 656 of the civil code, while wild birds are hidden within a person's inclosure, he has such rights in them as entitle him to protect them from invasion by those not authorized to be there, and any person violating such rights is as much a trespasser as though entering unbidden the plaintiff's dwelling."

More Free Government Seed

Hon. Duncan E. McKinlay, congressman from this district, has sent to this office from the department of agriculture at Washington a quantity of vegetable seed for free distribution. These consist of beans, lettuce, onion, raddish, tomato, turnip and muskmelon seed. Parties desiring samples will please call at this office. Don't write for them, as it costs postage stamps to forward them by mail.

A Token of Appreciation

Mr. L. H. Green, secretary of Sonoma Parlor, No. 111 N. S. G. W., was presented with a beautiful Morris chair by his fellow native sons at the regular monthly meeting of the parlor last Monday evening. Mr. Green has held the office of secretary of the parlor for many years and the gift came as a token of esteem.

Reports from the extension camp of the Northwestern Pacific railroad north of Sherwood, Mendocino county, say that good progress is being made toward Eureka. Six miles of heavy steel rails have recently been laid and much additional grading has also been done, the Utah Construction Company having large gangs of men employed on the work. The second steel bridge is being constructed across Outlet creek, one of the streams which the railroad tracks are to cross in that vicinity.

COUNTY HOSPITAL HAS CLOSE CALL

Through the prompt action of Louis P. Kearney the Sonoma County Hospital, Santa Rosa, was saved from fire last Wednesday morning.

The fire started in the old men's indigent ward and had made considerable progress when Louis Kearney, the county farmer, an appointee of Supervisor Blair Hart, who occupied a room nearby, heard the alarm. He rushed to the ward and with the assistance of volunteers soon had a stream of water playing on the blaze, which was quickly extinguished.

The blaze was started by an inmate who fired up the stove in the ward early in the morning and then left while the room was heating up. Heat from the stove ignited the woodwork through which the stovepipe passed and the blaze was rapidly gaining headway when extinguished by Kearney and his assistants.

Thirty-five inmates were aroused and hastily removed to a place of safety until all danger was passed. The loss was slight.

First Annual Industrial and Food Exposition

Petaluma is planning to hold one of the biggest and best expositions ever given in this section of the state. The exposition will open and continue up to and including April 3.

The civic bodies—Chamber of Commerce, Ladies' Improvement Club, Merchants' Association and Women's Club—are ably assisting the Patriarchs Militant Band, who are working hard on the commendable project and with very encouraging success.

The leading manufacturing concerns of Petaluma have already secured space in the big rink or annex in which to exhibit their products. Many big manufacturing plants in San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley and even so far away as Chicago and Kansas City are at present negotiating for space in which to show the product of their skill.

There will be a large display of all the latest agricultural implements, showing the latest in farming and poultry raising.

It will be a daily occurrence to see hatching, feeding and care of chicks throughout the exposition.

Of course, the major portion of the big show will be the display of all sorts of pure food products, accompanied by dozens of demonstrators, showing the superiority of methods or qualities in their preparations.

A list of valuable prizes will soon be published, showing what returns may be expected for meritorious displays of all kinds.

$100 REWARD $100

An Impromptu Christmas

And the True Christmas Feeling It Prompted

By EDWARD PIERCE

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

The blizzard raced across the foothills and screamed down the canyons, obliterating all trails that led to the Double Star ranch. It filled the air with smothering, flying flakes and plastered the sides of the bunk house with a thick white covering. The windows of the ranch house a hundred yards distant were oblongs of light that diffused a sickly yellow glow into the flying snow.

Ducie Case tossed another log on the blazing hearth and surveyed the silent crowd with growing disdain. At last he could no longer control himself and broke forth into violent speech:

"Say, you mum mouthed dummies, you long faced, solemn eyed, good-for-nothing cayuses, do you know this is Christmas eve?"

The moody circle about the fire straightened as by one accord and looked at the speaker with the first sign of interest that had been betrayed since the silent supper had ended.

"Do you know this is Christmas eve?" repeated Mr. Case impressively as he brought a pipe from his pocket and proceeded to clean it with the nervous energy that characterized his every movement.

"Of course we know it," growled Miller from his corner. "We didn't get any mail today—haven't had any for a week! Excuse—me—Christmas, coming! Bah!"

"You've got a grouch, Miller. You're always kicking about the mail, and I've never seen you get any letters yet—not even one of them picture postal cards that Frankie here gets so many of."

Ducie Case bustled out of his chair and noisily mounted the heavy table, where he looked down on his companions with a benevolent smile.

"Tonight's Christmas eve, boys, and I'm going to confess it's the onlikeliest Christmas eve I ever spent.

"Every one of you is downright homesick. That's what's the matter with you. I expect you're homesick every time Christmas comes around. If you can't get home to your folks and find an old fashioned Christmas—why, I say let's have Christmas right her in the Double Star bunk house. All in favor say 'eye.'"

"Aye!" came forth a mighty chorus from seven throats.

"Good! Now, gentlemen, there ain't any tree within three miles of the ranch except the maples at the big house, and they're too large. Can we have a Christmas tree?" he asked skeptically.

"Nix!" was the laconic reply.

"Well, then, you've all got socks. Hang 'em up here along by the chimney. We might as well do this Santy Claus business up nice and brown."

The men scattered, laughing, to their several bunks to search their effects for clean socks. When they returned Mr. Case was ready with hammer and nails to fasten them to the long shelf. The first to go up was his own, a huge blue woolen affair with a startling void presented by the sagging top.

"Now, what you going to put in 'em?" demanded Miller as he witnessed the hammering of the last nail into his own sock.

"Now, that's up to the rest of you in a way," drawled Mr. Case indifferently. "I've started this thing and got the ball rolling nicely. All you chaps has got to do is to find something to put in those socks. Seems as if you might find something to give each other just to remember the day and make things pleasant."

"Who feels like being very pleasant with no mail for a week and no prospect of any?" complained Frankie, rather peevishly. "I thought Christ was eve was the time for good things to eat and drink. I haven't seen the chink handing out any goodies yet."

"You go along and work that Christmas spirit business I was telling you about," commanded Mr. Case. "Sam Huh and me will take care of the eating end. Just watch my smoke!"

He disappeared behind the plank door that shut off the kitchen quarters from the living room, and they heard the sound of his strident voice mingled with the staccato objections of the Chinese cook.

Storrs stepped forward, a slight flush on his handsome face, and turned toward his companions. "I'm rather ashamed, boys, that Ducie had to remind us that it was the night before Christmas. It's certainly a dull time, and I believe we ought to do all we can to make it pleasant, even if the mail doesn't come at all. Suppose we make the best kind of a Christmas we can out of what we've got."

"Let's," agreed Miller boyishly. "Suppose we begin with Ducie's meal sack here. He must expect an automobile in that. What do you say?"

"Let's give him one," retorted Storrs cheerfully. "I saw one a minute ago." He reached for a magazine and drew a knife from his pocket. He turned to the advertising section and cut from it the picture of a large touring car. "What's the matter with that?" he crowed softly as he slipped it in Ducie's stocking.

"I got a couple of handkerchiefs that I've never used," said Frankie suddenly. "I'll give one to Ducie and one to somebody else. Let's get busy, boys."

They got busy and searched their trunks and their pockets for treasures that might go to fill a comrade's stocking. Pocketknives, handkerchiefs, a watch chain, a key ring, neck handkerchiefs, a pair of spurs, tobacco, cigars, a patent pencil, matchboxes—all changed hands deftly from pockets to one or another of the yawning stockings. When the little store of articles gave out they had recourse to the magazine and lavished all sorts of lithographed gifts upon each other.

They all entered into the spirit of the thing with an abandonment that was pathetic when one considered the barrenness of the ground upon which they tried to graft a Christmas. Whatever else the occasion lacked, the Yuletide spirit was there.

When Ducie Case emerged from the kitchen with the thoroughly cowed Sam Huh in his train they were laden with plates of red apples and yellow oranges, plates of crisp cakes fresh from their paper boxes and a large dish of candy, which Ducie placed in the middle of the table.

"Bring in the coffee, Sam, when I holler," said Ducie ceremoniously. Then he turned to the grinning cowpunchers surrounding the fire. "Let's see what Santy Claus has got for us, eh, boys?"

"You first, Ducie!" they insisted, and they watched him delightedly as he brought forth from the stocking a paper of his favorite tobacco, which Storrs also carried, and a silver watch chain.

"That was a great idea of mine," chuckled Ducie after he had identified the givers and thanked them warmly. "I have a feeling that this here is to be a kind of a merry Christmas, even if the mail don't get in."

After that there was no end to the fun. Each man found several surprising gifts in his stockings, and there was much merriment in identifying the givers and more interchange of good feeling than the Double Star had known in some time.

Presently Sam Huh brought in a pot of steaming coffee, and they gathered about the board and ate of the refreshments and toasted Mr. Ducie in the stimulating black liquid with much flattery.

When the meal was concluded Raymond Storrs sang a song in his fine tenor voice. It was a Christmas carol, one that they all knew, and they joined in the chorus with a vim. Frankie delivered an amusing monologue, and the taciturn Miller gave an absurdly funny imitation of a fashionable lady buying a hat. There were other songs and recitations and the quaffing of a weirdly constructed bowl of punch that Sam Huh had laboriously put together from several cookbooks and unlimited advice from the different members of the party.

"What's the matter with this Christmas?" demanded Frankie excitedly as 11 o'clock was struck on the tall clock in the corner.

"It's all right! It's been a bully one! Couldn't be better! Up to us to thank Ducie!" were some of the comments on the occasion.

There was the sound of hoofs pounding in the snow outside and a loud shout. Every man was on his feet with interested faces.

They crowded about the door as Mr. West came over from the big house to open the mail bag. It had stopped snowing, and the stars were blazing in a cold, clear, dark sky.

"Letter for you, and you, and you," rattled Mr. West as he tossed letters here and there among his employees. They grasped them eagerly and then tucked them away for private perusal. It happened that each one received at least one letter, and Raymond Storrs received several with a San Francisco postmark, as well as a wooden case that was dumped on the floor ere the letter carrier drove away.

Storrs ripped off the cover while they hung breathlessly over him. From numerous careful wrappings he drew forth a large phonograph with a morning glory horn and a collection of wax music rolls. Deftly Storrs fitted the parts together and placed the machine on the table and wound it up. There was a cylinder in the machine, as if his sweetheart, who had sent it, had left it there that he might hear the continuation of a melody she had been singing.

There was a low, buzzing sound, and then there came forth from that instrument of wood and metal a sweet soprano voice singing with a delicate violin accompaniment:

"Oh, holy night, peaceful night."

As the hymn rang out every hat was whipped off and the little group stood bareheaded in the open doorway looking out at the same brilliant stars that had shone down over Bethlehem that long ago holy night when the first Christmas was sung over one who brought peace and good will into the world.

Afterward, as they followed Mr. West across the yard toward the big house where he said a feast awaited them, Frankie nudged Ducie Case with a razor-like elbow.

"I learned one thing tonight," admitted Frankie graciously, "and that was you can have Christmas cheer most anywhere, provided you've got the ingredients in your heart—eh?"

Ducie nodded. "Everybody has got the ingredients to make a happy Christmas in their hearts, only they don't stir 'em together to make 'em work properly. Haven't they, Norman?" He shot this question at the tall young man walking beside him with radiant face upturned to the stars.

Storrs pressed the phonograph that had registered the singing voice of his sweetheart close under his arm and smiled contentedly.

"You bet!" he cried emphatically.
